

THE STATE

Group of individuals who claim the right to initiate force against others, which possesses an exclusive monopoly of ultimate decision-making and conflict arbitration within a specific geographic region.

CORPORATISTS

Those benefiting from government-business collusion in order to eliminate competition and gain private advantage through state violence and force; often confused with capitalism.

STATE VIOLENCE

Exclusive monopoly of force and coercion claimed by the state, primarily through the instruments of various agents such as the police and military; is also delegated to other actors in certain cases.

CENTRAL BANKING

With the instrument of central banking, a boom-bust cycle of malinvestment is generated by excessive and unsustainable credit expansion to business and borrowers through the banks.

THE INDIVIDUAL

Ultimately the burden and costs of the state fall on the individual who is forced to pay for its unsustainable practices
